"Interacting with a horse is an empowering experience which can enable the practice of unique skills in a non-judgmental environment."

Tauseef brings a richly diverse background and a unique set of perspectives to management consulting, strategy and corporate training. He is passionate about enhancing the role of modern corporate leadership. He resolutely believes that leadership is a skill, a skill that can be learned, developed and applied to bring about tangible results.

Tauseef is a certified Edward De Bono Thinking Skills Consultant, and CEO of Cavayo Consulting. He has previously worked at Xerox UK Ltd as a strategist at the Global Services Consulting Unit and later as an International Equity Investment Trader, before dedicating his extensive talents towards his passion for people, environment and horses.

With a life long association with horses, he has trained in High Level Natural Horsemanship and is a Certified Equine Facilitator from the European Association of Horse Assisted Education. He has lectured on the topic "how horses help develop leadership skills" at conferences in Europe and The Middle East. Tauseef has worked and lived in Saudi Arabia, UK, UAE and Pakistan and presents a diverse and multicultural insight to his efforts. He possesses a world class education reading Management Sciences and Sustainable Development at the UK's premier academic institutions, Loughborough University and the University of London, respectively.

Equine Inspired Leadership

Develop leadership skills via combined principles of emotional intelligence and natural horsemanship

Course Overview:

Man's essence of discovery and journey was on the back of the horse. The horse gave man the freedom to discover, to roam, to settle new lands, to become who he wanted to be. The intrinsic nature of mankind's journey had an inert acceptance of the spirit of the horse.

Horse Assisted Education is a globally practiced, proven concept that suits those seeking to enhance their current practice with programs that emphasize conscious awareness and impact behavior change. Interacting with a horse is an empowering experience which can enable the practice of unique skills in a non-judgmental environment.

The program provides candidates an opportunity to develop leadership skills and engage in team building activities through the use of a dynamic experiential learning model. While working with the horses you will see that attitude is nearly everything. Experience how important trust, respect, honesty, humility, integrity, and authenticity are in effective leadership and in getting results.

Key Benefits:

- Analyzing and developing leadership style
- Developing new and enhanced leadership skills
- Understanding personal strengths and power
- Developing trust, cohesiveness and mutual support
- Utilizing effective feedback
- Enhancing communication skills
- Developing emotional intelligence and self awareness

Experiential Learning Methodology:

Experiential learning is a well-known model in education. Kolb's Experiential Learning Theory (Kolb, 1984) defines experiential learning as 'the process whereby knowledge is created through the transformation of experience. Knowledge results from the combination of grasping and transforming experience.'

"If you tell me, I will listen. If you show me, I will see. But if you let me experience, I will learn."

Lao Tzu

Who Should Attend?

Business heads along with managers and executives in corporate settings who wish to experience accelerated learning in areas of leadership, team building and relationship development.

Note: Participants will be handling and interacting with real horses. No riding or prior equestrian skills are necessary for the program.

Why Horses?

Horses are wise mentors in this unique type of work. As prey animals, their "flight" instincts become instant mirrors and non-judgmental feedback mechanisms for humans. Horses sense and respond to a person's intentions, emotions and thoughts that are conveyed subconsciously through body language. Through the experience of observing a horse's response to their requests and directions, each person learns how to communicate more effectively, face their fears and manage their emotions, and become more consistent and congruent with their actions.

Through observation of herd dynamics and one-on-one interaction with individual horses, attendees also learn new relationship building skills. A tremendous confidence boost comes from learning how to connect with and direct a one-thousand-pound animal while standing on the ground. Sessions with horses are highly interactive and provide an 'in the moment' learning experience, teaching skills which can be difficult to acquire in more traditional settings.

Course Agenda:

The course combines specific interactive horse related activities ranging from grooming and care giving to assessing horse behavior and playing with horses in a safe, enclosed environment, as well as developmental workshops and lectures emphasizing personal and group social and emotional awareness.

1 and 2 day courses are specific to Emotional Intelligence and Leadership.
Programs are designed bespoke to client preferences.
